WATCHMAN IS CHOKED UNTIL DEAD BY THUGS

Attacked Without Cause as Man Then Escapes, but Later He Was Preparing His Supper.

On suspicion of being one of two men who committed a brutal murder, Joseph Thomas is locked up in the Stagg No. 320 West Forty-ninth street, was street police station, Brooklyn, to-day. arraigned in the West Side Court to-The murder was committed while half day on a charge of felonious asseult. a hundred women and children looked The police of the West Forty-seventh on, too shocked to aid the victim, Borech Minorosfk, a night-watchman employed by Cohen Bros., who are erecting some tenement-houses at Porter avenue and Grattan street, Williamsburg. The watchman, a serious-minded Russian, was in the habit of cooking his frugal supper after he arrived at work, making a fire between two small piles of bricks and setting his pot of coffee

Before 7 o'clock last evening, while heating his coffee, two young fellows came along. One gave the can a kick, knocking it off the fire and demolishing his lunch near by. One a laborer, who came on the run.

The two young ruffians left their victim and ran. Fassel ran to Minorosik and ploked him up. He gave a look at the man and ran after the men who had assaulted him. He was unable to oatch them, and later a policeman arrested Thomas, who says he is a 'longshoreman, eighteen years old, and lives at No. 1490 De Kalb avenue.

Minorosik, when picked up, was dead. The life had been choked out of him by the young thug who held him by the throat while the other kicked him.

Thomas denied knowing anything about the murder, but Fassel said he was almost sure he was the man he saw choking the watchman. Thomas also said that he went home last evening after finishing work and later went to a saloon on Knickerbocker avenue, near Johnson street. The police learned from Thomas's mother that he had not been at home for two days.

Thomas was held without bail for further hearing on Sept. 8.
